The Waterloo Wildlife/Game Unit is described as the area in the T1S,R2E block (Waterloo Township) or is those State Lands located north-west of the city of Waterloo. The Waterloo Game Unit has been incorrectly called the Waterloo State Game Area (there is no Waterloo State Game Area); however the entire area is part of the Waterloo State Recreation Area.

The hunting seasons offer a wide variety of hunting opportunities during the appropriate seasons. Hunting is not restricted to just the Game Unit; however there are several critically important areas closed to hunting and there are areas where hunters must consider safety zone issues and possible nearby private landowners. Carefully check your plans and range of fire, for safety.

Nonhunting wildlife enthusiasts, like bird watchers, can enjoy the spring and fall migrations of waterfowl, warblers and many other birds. Thousands of Canada geese, mallards and wood ducks may be seen in March and April on the numerous wetlands of Waterloo area. Cameras are welcome, but photographers must respect posted limits, if any.

All visitors need to park in assigned locations, to help protect the edges of the area and prevent erosion. All visitors are encouraged to enjoy and use Waterloo, however respect the other visitors around you and be aware some areas may be nearby, where visitors are unaware hunters and/or not focused on wildlife, such as in those areas closed to hunting yet open to lake, shore or other outdoor recreational activities.
